PRESS RELEASE 1 July 2020

TPG Launches Matrix Renewables with The Rise Fund's Acquisition of 1GW of Solar PV Projects from Trina Solar

New renewable energy platform will look to operate, acquire, and develop additional solar and clean energy infrastructure projects

1 July 2020 – San Francisco, CA; Fort Worth, TX; London, UK; Madrid, Spain – The Rise Fund, a global impact investing fund managed by alternative asset firm TPG, today announced the acquisition of approximately 1 gigawatt (GW) of solar PV projects from Changzhou, China-based Trina Solar (SHA:688599). The solar PV projects included in the transaction are currently operational, under construction or in late stage development nearing ready-to-build status across Spain, Chile, Colombia, and Mexico, and will serve as the first solar PV projects within the portfolio of newly created, Madrid-based Matrix Renewables. Terms of the transaction were not disclosed.

TPG and The Rise Fund are assembling an industry-leading management team for Matrix Renewables and will leverage the firm's extensive investing and business building experience, global network, and deep cross-platform infrastructure and renewable energy expertise to develop and acquire additional solar PV projects globally.

"We are excited to launch Matrix Renewables with such a geographically diverse set of high-quality solar PV projects," said Ed Beckley, a Partner at TPG who leads the firm's infrastructure investing efforts. "Trina is one of the leading manufacturers of solar PVs, with a history of developing world-class solar PV projects in key markets. With the establishment of Matrix Renewables and the leadership of a seasoned management team, we are actively looking for additional strategic opportunities to grow our global portfolio and build out the platform."

"The global solar PV market continues to grow rapidly as it benefits from a number of secular tailwinds including the accelerating shift to decarbonization," said Steve Ellis, Co-Managing Partner of The Rise Fund. "Solar PV development is one of the many ways The Rise Fund is tackling climate change and addressing the climate, energy, and responsible consumption-focused United Nations Sustainable Development Goals. We look forward to growing the Matrix Renewables portfolio to accelerate positive environmental impact well-beyond this initial 1GW of clean energy generation."

TPG has been building out a dedicated infrastructure investing team, based in its London office, with key hires over the last year, including Steven Mandel who brings deep experience in renewables investments. The team works across TPG platforms and their partnership with The Rise Fund in this transaction led to the formation of Matrix Renewables. TPG's infrastructure team also recently led the firm's investment into Abengoa S.A.'s operating electricity transmission line assets in Brazil. Throughout TPG's history, the firm has made a number of investments in the broader infrastructure asset class around the world, including in transportation, telecommunications, and renewable energy.
